Criteria:

The committee will consider:

- Nominee's demonstration of leadership and vision. How the nominee's contribution has altered the landscape of the financial literacy effort and/or has led to other individual/organizational achievements.
- The significance and effectiveness of the nominee's contribution(s) to personal financial education for students—how important, unique and/or widespread the contribution is—and its spirit of inclusiveness.
- Length of time the individual has "labored in the vineyard of personal financial education."

Background: The JumpStart Coalition established the William E. Odom Visionary Leadership Award in 1999. Today, the Odom Award is the highest award given for individual contributions that further personal financial education/literacy among students in pre-kindergarten through college. Mr. Odom, former chairman of Ford Motor Credit Company, is both the inspiration for the award and its first recipient. While at Ford, he played a key role in starting "Credit Drives America," a program begun by Ford Credit in 1990 to educate community college and high school students about the importance of credit. A long-time supporter of consumer education, it was his central vision that led to the formation of the JumpStart Coalition.
